Sustainable Green Printing Seminar & Trade Show

Gary Jones
*Director, Environmental, Health
& Safety Affairs
PIA/GATF*

In his position at PIA/GATF, Gary's primary responsibility is to monitor and analyze EHS regulatory activities at all government levels and provide representation on behalf of the printing industry. He specializes in air pollution permits and control requirements, waste minimization and disposal, wastewater discharges, health and safety and other compliance related issues. Gary is widely considered a leading authority in his field.

For PIA/GATF, Gary provides membership assistance, regularly presents lectures and conducts workshops. He has written several publications and a regular column in GATF's bi-monthly technical magazine. Gary heads up PIA/GATF's efforts for the Sustainable Green Printing Partnership, an organization dedicated to assisting printers respond to the customer demand for environmentally friendly printing.

Prior to joining GATF in 1987, Gary worked in the field of forensic science as an analytical chemist. He holds a BS in biology from LaRoche College and an MS in chemistry from the University of Pittsburgh.

- Never before in the history of printing has the push for environmental responsibility been so popular – and so necessary.
- The issue of “sustainable green” printing has rapidly emerged to become one of the most pressing issues faced by printers.
- Printers of all sizes are under pressure by their customers to demonstrate that they are producing products and using a manufacturing process that is considered to be environmentally friendly.
- Gary's presentation will explore the motivating factors, benefits and how to respond to customer demands for producing green printing.
- The presentation will also include an update on the Sustainable Green Printing Partnership.
